Brian Friel's

Faith Healer

How to characterize Brian Friel's magical play Faith Healer...a metaphor for the plight of the artist? Certainly. A lamenting depiction of the elusiveness of reality? ...yes. And in this electronic age of visual spectacle, a return to the lyric power of the word? Of Course. But most importantly perhaps as the charting of one man's quest for the resolution of the universal existential questions and fears that are our common inheritance.

Produced by the Phoenix Arts Association and featuring Rachel Klyce, Christian Phillips and Keith Phillips

Performances at 8PM on November 22,23,29,30, and December 6 & 7
